If you are new to Hoddesdon - it is a historic market town in south east Hertfordshire with ancient charters granted by Henry III in 1253 for both a weekly market and an annual fair. Large parts of the town form a conservation area comprising numerous beautiful, historic buildings and inns. The town centre is located close to the A10 and has good transport links, a good range of supermarkets and independent retailers, including numerous restaurants and cafes, as well as ample public parking.
